ABOUT ME

I grew up in Medellin Colombia, where I became passionate about sustainable urban architecture and design to respond to contemporary needs and future issues.

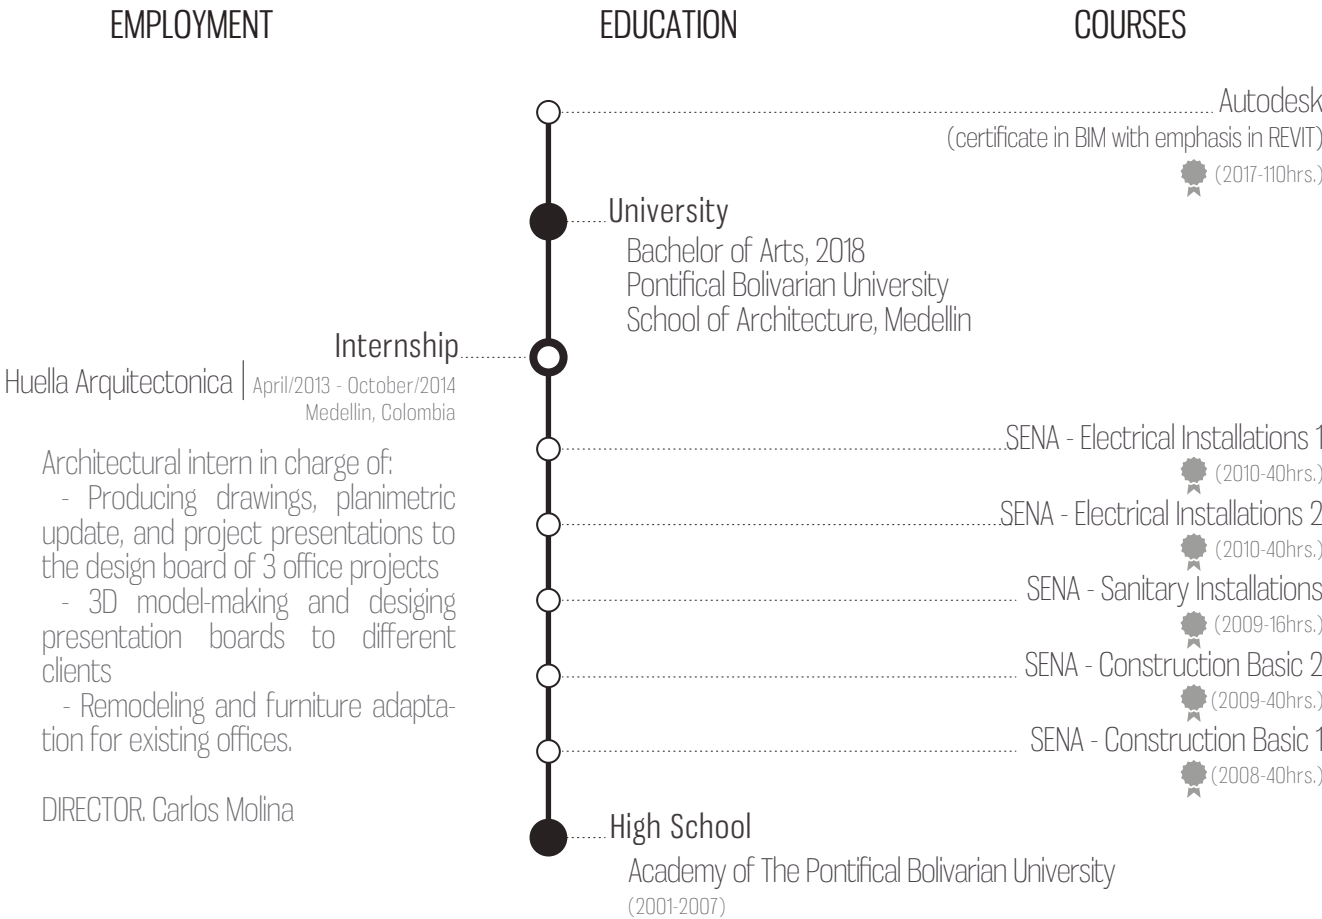

In 2015 I moved to the US to join my husband, who is a professor at UC Merced; I currently hold legal green-card status. Having resided in Colombia, Italy and the US has contributed to my multi-cultural perspective, one that embraces the tension between tradition and innovation.

My best attributes are - enthusiasm and attention to detail; ability to incorporate instructions and feedback into the design projects; experience working in both independent and team environments.

My fundamental mission is to design and transform spaces in a way that accounts for both human and environmental needs.
